Maryland Church Seeks Aid to Raise Regional Landmark

Friends in Jesus Evangelistic Church near Cumberland, Md., has begun site work to build two 150-foot crosses and one 153-foot cross on a seven-acre hill behind its facility in Cresaptown, Md. Church cross and sign manufacturer Headrick Co. of Laurel, Miss., developed a computerized plan for the crosses that will ensure they are seen for miles around the Cresaptown area, according to a Headrick account executive, John Rebry.

Pastor Bartholomew Frankenberry with Friends in Jesus has begun a capital campaign to raise money for the project following a vision to erect the crosses. Information on the project and on donation contribution is available by calling Frankenberry at (301) 707-0922 or (301) 729-1122.

Laurel, Miss.-based Headrick Co. created a computerized image to help cement a Cumberland, Md.-area church's vision to raise three massive crosses on a highly visible hill behind its facility.
